In Microsoft Word 2013, to move or copy a single instance of a paragraph or character to another location, you can use the mouse or keyboard to move the selection. However, more often than not, when you move a selected text in the last half of the document you may have an unwanted result. If you press the Enter key while you select the rest of the text, the whole document will be moved. To change this behavior, you can set it to use the keyboard selection and move the selected text to the pasted position.
